

Robert Steele turned away from the monitors and looked at Hank Turner. "I know. I saw them both when they came into the auditorium before the conference started. I don't know who that other person is with her, but we cannot afford to let them get away. Follow them. See where they are going, and bring them back to the lab. I don't care how you do it, but it has to be done today. There will be others joining you to help with their capture. Keep me posted on everything that is happening. The lab will be ready for them when you bring them back."

Hank Turner looked at Robert very intensely with his computerized stare. "Okay. I will get right on it."

"Make sure you do, and no slip-ups this time. Hank, do I need to remind you, I do not want them hurt?"

"No, Mr. Steele, I understand, they will not be hurt."

"Good. I'm going back to the reception. My communication device will be on me at all times. Call me if you need to"

"I will, Mr. Steele."

With that Hank Turner left to follow Rachel and Sandra. He signaled Tom Campbell and Marsha Morgan, who were both on the security staff of Konard Industries, to accompany him to abduct Rachel and Sandra. Tom and Marsha were both from the planet Titania and also served as part of Robert's executive team running Konard Industries. They were also the driving force along with him and his Titanian military force spearheading the invasion to the planet Earth.

The news conference ended around 11:30 A.M. Rachel, as well as Sandra, was very relieved that the news conference was finally over as they headed for the outside parking lot.

"Well, that certainly was a lot of information to take in."

"Yes Sandra, you are right. All this information is certainly raising cause for concern, especially in light of the evidence Martin left me. According to Martin's documents about the invasion, these aliens have technology that is far beyond ours on Earth. It looks like Konard Industries is using alien technology and passing it off as something Konard Industries developed."

"That's what it sounds like, Rachel. No telling how long this has been going on, without anyone knowing about it, at least not until Martin brought the invasion plan to your attention."

"Sandra, we had better get out of here before we start to draw any more attention."

Sandra and Rachel exited the building and walked to the direction where Sandra's car was parked, they got in, and Sandra drove out of the parking lot.
